CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC!

DR. BRIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE.

Whereas it having become known to the Proprietors of Dr. BRIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE that a Medicine, emanating from an unscrupulous London firm, is exported to India and China, and foisted on purchasers as equal in efficacy to Dr. Bright's Phosphodyne, they feel it due to the public to specially caution them against this compound and request their most careful attention to the following distinctive characteristics of Dr. Bright's Phosphodyne:

1st.—That Dr. Bright's Phosphodyne is sold only in cases.

2nd.—The words "Dr. Bright's Phosphodyne" are clearly blown in each bottle.

3rd.—The Registered Trade Mark and Signature of Patentee are printed on the label of every case.

HONGKONG, JULY 20TH, 1878.

Our Shanghai morning contemporary gives currency to a rumour that CH'UNG HOW, now Military Governor of Fêng-tien, and notorious through having been the bearer of an apology to Paris after the Tientsin Massacre, is about to be accredited as Ambassador to some European Court. China is already represented in London, Paris, and Berlin; and our contemporary therefore leaps to the conclusion that St. Petersburg is the destination of the new Envoy. This is highly probable. There is no other Power in Europe whose commercial relations with China are so large as those of Russia, with the exception of the three already honoured with Chinese Ministers, and it is consequently pretty certain that CH'UNG HOW, if despatched anywhere abroad, will go to St. Petersburg. There are, moreover, questions between the two countries which the Government of Peking would like to see settled. Now that Kashgar has fallen into Chinese hands, the rulers of Peking naturally wish to secure it against further rebellion or intrigue. They do not want to have to repeat their work over again. It has been costly and difficult, and might have proved far more so had Russia chosen to place impediments in the way of the Chinese Generals. But that was not Muscovite policy. It suited Russia best to see the power of the Ameer broken, and the nucleus of what might have developed into a formidable Mahomedan kingdom destroyed. To that end the Russians supplied the Chinese army with grain, and maintained a benevolent neutrality throughout the contest. But it remains to be seen whether they did so without thought or hope of reward. The Chinese territory now in Russian occupation has never been willingly or formally surrendered by the Chinese Government, who are anxious for its restitution. CH'UNG HOW will, if appointed Ambassador to the Court of St. Petersburg, no doubt be charged with the negotiation of this matter. Sinister intentions have, not without some reason, been attributed to the Russian Government in connection with Kashgar, and latterly the Russian Governor of Turkestan has assumed a less friendly demeanour towards China. No doubt this is attributed by the Russians to the atrocities committed by the Chinese troops in Central Asia, against which, indeed, General KAUFMANN has rightly remonstrated. But reports have come, through Berlin, that Russia is nursing the Kuldja Question, and that she has grievances against China, owing to some Russian traders having been interfered with by the troops of KIN SHUN. The refugees from Kashgar and Khotan are also, the Russians aver, a great burden to them, and they regard the Chinese Commander-in-Chief as responsible for this large and unwelcome immigration into their territory, the fugitives having deserted their homes on account of the ferocious excesses of the Chinese soldiery. Altogether it would be very easy for the Russian Government to make out a case against China without half the trouble experienced in finding a casus belli against Turkey. It will thus be seen that the Chinese have good reasons for sending an Envoy to St. Petersburg. It is a matter of great importance to the occupant of the Dragon Throne that he should remain at peace with his Imperial brother the Czar of all the Russias. Their frontiers meet for a long distance in Asia, and a war with a great military Power like Russia would mean simple ruin to China. Diplomacy will, however, no doubt, avert such a contingency.

The steamers Flintshire, Captain G. Reynolds, and Radnorshire, Captain E. Thomson, were, at last advices from home, loading in the South West India Docks, London, for Singapore, Hongkong, and Yokohama.

We would remind our readers that Dr. Silvester and Professor Fay give their opening performance at the Theatre Royal, City Hall this evening. They are so well and widely known as the original Fakir of Oola and the real Professor Fay, that it is needless to say anything about the entertainment, which will undoubtedly prove most attractive.

A Portuguese woman has lately been annoying people on board the vessels in harbour. She goes on board in the middle of the day and presents two petitions setting forth that she is destitute and that she has a mother dependent upon her. The statement the woman makes herself is quite contradictory to that in the petition. Too much caution cannot be used against this impertinate beggar.

The commercial report of the Foochow Herald, dated the 11th instant, thus refers to the tea market at that port:—"A steady business has been reported throughout the week. Congou.—Common grades show a slight decline in value, doubtless owing to the increased supply, but flavoury descriptions command fully last week's rates. The second crop is considered good average quality. Souchong:—Rather smaller transactions are reported, at about previous quotations.

A DISPUTED CHARTER-PARTY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

SIR,—In September last I closed at Lima with Mr. Vicmor Tejerina a charter for the German barque Hydra under my command, to take to Amoy a cargo of guano at the rate of £4 sterling per ton guano delivered at Amoy. This amount of freight was stipulated in the charter-party, and the bills of lading were made out, "freight as per charter-party." The charterer at Lima was a stranger to me. On offering me the above charter he made the condition that I should refund him £1 sterling per ton freight on each ton guano delivered after collection of the stipulated freight at Amoy. This condition I consented to accept and gave charterer accordingly a promissory note to the effect that, after collection of freight at the rate of £4 sterling per ton due to the vessel at Amoy, I would pay him £1 sterling out of every £4 sterling per ton received.

On my arrival at Amoy I duly commenced discharging the cargo, naturally presuming that freight would be paid to me in accordance with the terms of the charter-party. While discharging I received several amounts of money on account of freight due, and nothing was said or done by the consignees of the cargo to disabuse me of my conviction that they would discharge their obligations in full. I had a lien on the cargo and would have retained the whole or a portion of it had I had any cause for misgivings that the owners of the cargo were meditating a different course of action.

After having discharged all the cargo I sent in my freight bill, drawn up according to the terms of charter-party. The owners of cargo, however, now declined to pay me at the stipulated rate of £4 sterling per ton on the ground that they had become aware that I was to refund the charterer £1 sterling per ton out of every £4 sterling received, and that consequently, my having earned but £3 sterling per ton, they were not bound to pay me in excess of these £3 sterling. The owners of cargo likewise refused to let me have my charter-party back, which I had handed them for their inspection shortly after my arrival at Amoy.

All the documents in reference to the above charter were legitimate ones. I had, during the transaction, no knowledge whatever of the relations existing between the charterer and the consignees of the cargo, and, being simply the conveyor of goods, had neither the right nor the desire to concern myself with those relations. Nevertheless I made, before closing the charter, inquiries as to whether the vessel under my command might possibly get into trouble or become in any way responsible through my accepting the conditions proposed by the charterer. I was assured that the arrangement was based on an understanding between the charterers and the consignees or owners of the cargo; besides, there was, at the same time, a British vessel in the port of Lima which had accepted a charter to Amoy on precisely the same terms and conditions. The freight stipulated in the charter-party, was, under all circumstances, due and payable to the vessel as long as no claim was made against the cargo, which was not.

The owners of the cargo are British subjects, and I took, after every other means of obtaining my money had failed, proceedings against them in the British Consular Court at Amoy. My petition was dismissed with costs and the following judgment delivered:—

"The claim is for balance of freight on a cargo of guano brought by plaintiff, the master of the German barque Hydra, from Peru to Amoy, and consigned to the defendants. In support thereof it is urged by plaintiff—1st that in taking delivery of the cargo defendants agreed to be bound by the covenants of a charter-party signed by the shipper, Mr. Tejerina, of Lima, and himself in regard thereto; and, 2nd, that when taking such delivery they agreed to pay him the freight due upon the cargo.

"In regard of the 1st contention I can find no evidence whatever of such agreement expressed or implied, nor, had they so agreed, would they have been further bound by it when they obtained evidence of the fraud attempted on them.

"That the charter-party was fraudulent the evidence of the plaintiff alone leaves no doubt, and as it is equally apparent therefrom that Captain Oest was perfectly aware of the fraud and a party to it, the Court is constrained to express a strong opinion in regard of the utterly discreditable nature of the transaction; that others have committed similar frauds is no justification of his conduct and had he even established the fact of a general practice on the part of shipmasters and shipping agents of similar dishonesty the Court could not and would not have upheld it.

"In regard of the second contention there is a dispute, the consignees of the cargo have throughout expressed their readiness to pay the freight actually due on the cargo and have in fact paid the amount which it appears from the evidence of the plaintiff he had agreed on, to wit, £3 per ton.

"The petition is dismissed; costs to be borne by plaintiff; $50 allowed for legal expenses.

"(Signed) CHAS. ALABASTER, Consul.
"(Signed) ARTHUR CORNER } Assessors."
"(Signed) J. C. WARDLAW }

I am in the service of one of the largest shipowners in Germany and have always enjoyed the full confidence of my employers; yet in the above judgment I am branded as a defrauder and my civil action for recovering a large sum due to me by the explicit terms of a bona fide contract is turned, as it were, into a criminal action against me for dishonesty and imposition.

Not the faintest attempt is made to examine into the origin and the circumstances of the transaction, and the fact that I obtained no profit or advantage whatever in accepting the conditions of the charter-party is altogether ignored; my own assertions and explanations are rejected as false and futile, and my character is taken away with a few strokes of the pen as in the case of a notorious defrauder of long standing.

These disclosures in regard to my moral value I have had to pay for with close on $200, and I am informed that an appeal will cost me about treble that sum.

I refrain from further comment, leaving it to the public to weigh the merits of the case.—I am, Sir,

Your obedient Servant
(Signed) J. OEST,
Master German barque Hydra, of Hamburg.

THE HONGKONG, CANTON AND MACAO STEAMBOAT COMPANY, LIMITED.

The following is the report of the Board of Directors to the ordinary half-yearly meeting of shareholders, to be held at the office of the company on Wednesday next at three p.m.:—

The directors beg to submit to the shareholders the account of the company for the half-year ending 30th June last.

After paying running expenses, premia of insurance, salaries, and extraordinary repairs to the White Cloud and Kinshan amounting to $32,609.44, there remains, including $17,518.16 brought forward from last account and $3,920 the fine on the Kinshan remitted by H. E. the Governor, a net profit of $36,149.92. The directors recommend the distribution of a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 3 per cent. on the paid up capital, which will absorb $18,000; the appropriation of $2,500 as directors' remuneration; and the carrying forward of the balance, $15,649.92, to new account. Considering that the competition on the river has continued, it is hoped that the result of the half-year's working will be viewed as satisfactory by the shareholders.

The cost of repairing the Kinshan has been much heavier than was anticipated, but the strength of the vessel has been greatly increased, and the timbers and keelson under the engine and boilers entirely renewed. The company's fleet is now in good order, and it is not expected that any of the steamers will have to be laid up for overhauling during the next six months.

Messrs. W. H. Forbes, F. B. Johnson and A. McIver have resigned their seats at the Board. Mr. A. Lind, at the directors' invitation, has joined the Board, and his election requires confirmation by the shareholders. The Board now consists of Messrs. W. Keswick, E. R. Bellilios, W. Reiners, and A. Lind.

The retiring auditors, Messrs. H. Smith and L. Hauschild, offer themselves for re-election.

W. KESWICK, Chairman.
Hongkong, 16th July, 1878.

THE HONGKONG HOTEL COMPANY, LIMITED.

The following is the report of the directors to be presented at the ordinary meeting of shareholders, to be held at the Company's Hotel, at four o'clock p.m., on Wednesday next:—

In accordance with section 53 of the Articles of Association the directors have again to submit to you their half-yearly report with statement of accounts for the six months ending 30th June, 1878.

NEW LEASE.

The directors have much pleasure in announcing to the shareholders that after long negotiations with parties in Great Britain and the United States, which did not produce the desired result, they have succeeded in concluding a fresh lease with the present lessees, Messrs. Nowrojee and Hingkee, for a term of five years at a monthly rental of $1,900 for the first three and of $2,000 for the succeeding two years.

The directors having undertaking to paint and repair the building, to effect some desirable improvements of a permanent character in the same, to supply new furniture and appointments and to construct a bowling alley on the premises, a sum of $12,000 will be required, but as this expense will be a charge on and be distributed over the whole term of the lease, it will not interfere with the regular payments of the usual half-yearly dividends.

LOAN ACCOUNT.

A further sum of $3,000 has, during the past six months, been paid off, thus reducing the company's debt to $58,000.

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT.

This account shows a credit balance of $6,916.00, of which amount the directors, with your concurrence, propose to distribute amongst the shareholders a dividend of $2.50 per share, thus absorbing a sum of $4,645 and to write the balance $2,301.93 off "Hotel and Furniture" account.

DIRECTORS.

According to section 82 of the Articles of Association two of the directors, Messrs. E. R. Bellilios and W. R. Landstein retire from the Board, but are eligible for re-election. Mr. Wm. Reiners has resigned his directorship, and Mr. H. Hoppius, at the invitation of the directors, has accepted a seat at the Board, which election requires the confirmation of the shareholders.

AUDITORS.

Messrs. A. E. Voucher and H. Cohen, the retiring auditors, are recommended by the directors for re-election.

E. R. BELILIOS, Chairman.

POLICE COURT.

19th July.

BEFORE THE HON. CHARLES MAY.

PICKPOCKETS.

Tai Ayan and Tai Ali were charged on suspicion with picking pockets.

A Chinese detective, named Pang Aloi, was walking by the Harbour Master's Office on Thursday morning, where a crowd of emigrants were. The prisoners, who are well known to the detective, were seen amongst the crowd moving about in a very suspicious manner. The detective watched them and saw the first prisoner hand the the second prisoner the envelope of a Chinese letter and some broken silver. The prisoners were then taking into custody, but no person could be found to own the envelope or broken silver.

The first prisoner said he was a pickpocket once and had been in gaol, but he was now an honest, respectable man, and got his living as a tailor. He was amongst the crowd to see a friend off. The broken silver he had come honestly by. His wife had given it to him that day, but he did not know how much silver there was.

The second prisoner said he was a new comer.

His Worship sentenced the prisoners to one month's imprisonment with hard labour as rogues and vagabonds.

UNLAWFUL POSSESSION OF A TEAPOT.

Fong Atim was brought up, on remand, charged with being in unlawful possession of an electro plated teapot which had been stolen from the London Mission House.

The prisoner in defence said he bought the teapot from a collector of old wares on the 7th instant, at about ten o'clock a.m., in the Hollywood road, for $1.80. He was about to sell it again when he was apprehended.

His Worship fined the prisoner £5; in default, three months' imprisonment with hard labour.

MARINE COURT.

19th July.

BEFORE J. P. MCEUEN, ESQ., R.N.

REFUSAL OF DUTY.

James Horne and John Smith, a seaman on the British bark Queen of the Seas, was charged by Henry Havera, master of the said vessel, for refusal of duty on board on the 16th instant.

The complainant said that the prisoners were on the articles. On the 16th instant at about eight o'clock a.m., the first prisoner refused duty, saying he was tired and would not do any more work. About noon the same day the second prisoner refused duty saying the same as the first prisoner. On the 17th instant witness sent for both of the prisoners, and asked if they would not change their minds. They said no, they wanted to get out of the ship.

The first prisoner in defence said he could not obtain satisfaction in the ship, so he wanted to clear out of her. He had nothing whatever to say against the ship.

The second prisoner, in defence said his life was not safe in the ship. The mate had struck him twice, but he had never made a report of it to the magistrate, as he was not allowed to go on shore for that purpose.

His Worship sentenced the first prisoner to one month's imprisonment with hard labour.

The second prisoner was remanded for the appearance of the mate.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

Michael Thompson, a seaman on the British ship Sir Harry Parkes, was charged by Edward Alexe Crompton, chief officer of the said ship, with being drunk and disorderly on board on the 18th instant.

The prosecutor said the prisoner was upon the articles. On Thursday forenoon he heard a noise forward, and went to ascertain the cause, when he found the prisoner drunk and making a disturbance. He was told to be quiet and go on with his work, but he said he was a man, and would do as he liked. He used abusive language to the captain and witness. Witness sent for the police boat, upon the arrival of which witness told the prisoner that he would give him another chance if he would behave himself, but he was still abusive. This was the third offence the prisoner had committed.

The prisoner admitted the charge and said he was very sorry for what had occurred.

His Worship fined the prisoner $5.

SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

BEFORE MR. JUSTICE RUSSELL.

ALLEGED INHUMANITY AT SEA.

SUTTING v. ROOP, $374.40. This was a claim of $170.40 for wages as carpenter of the British bark The Frederick, and $100 for clothes and tools unlawfully detained by the master. The hearing of the case was resumed from Wednesday. Mr. Dennys appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Wotton for the defendant.

Richard Sisk was cross-examined. He said—I was one of the men casting up the anchor on the night we left Batavia. Frenchy was there and Bourke, the second mate. I do not know that the carpenter was there. Just as we had all sail set and the anchor was got up I saw the captain on deck. He was not there when the anchor was catted. He was there all the time we were setting sail and getting up the anchor, about two hours I should say. After we got the anchor up we commenced washing the mud off the chains. The captain was not there then. I do not remember anybody being called "the hangman" on board. I do not remember a nickname the carpenter had. I do not know that he was called "the hangman." I do not know that he tried to hang himself, or that any other man tried to hang himself on board. I heard about his trying to heave himself overboard. I am positive when the carpenter was struck at Kobe by the mate and Harris because he would not go on the stage that he was bleeding. I did not see them try to throw him overboard. I did not see everything because I had my scraping to attend to. A doctor came aboard at Batavia. I do not think he saw Raab. I did not ask leave to go ashore at Kobe. Some of the other men did. The captain took Frank Bell and me before the Consul for knocking off. We did not refuse duty; we wanted to see the Consul. I did not ask to go, but some of the others did and we all knocked off. When before the Consul we stated our case to him. I told him I was kicked and beaten and that I wanted my discharge. He told us I could not get my discharge, and to go aboard. He said if I did not go aboard I would have to go to gaol and I said I would take gaol first. Frank also told the Consul his complaints and grievances. This was on Saturday. Our trial was to come on Monday. We remained in prison until Monday night and then the police took us on board. I did not see the Consul again and there was no trial. I don't know that I said anything about bad feeding. My complaint about that is just the same as that of the other men, not of bad feeding but not getting enough of it. I thought I would have had a good opportunity of telling the Consul everything on Monday. The Consul questioned Frank Bell for about three quarters of an hour and then he questioned me for half-an-hour. He was in a hurry. Neither of us complained to him about the insufficiency of the food. We had a bumboat at that time and got plenty to eat. We were saving up our biscuits for sea use.

Re-examined by Mr. Dennys—On the Monday we did not go before the Consul at all. The sergeant came in and said the Consul had told him to take us aboard. No other men were examined as witnesses before the Consul by me. I was going to call them on Monday. The Consul said he would try us on Monday, and we told the policeman about it, but he said he must do as he was told and took us aboard. Frank Bell told the Consul he would sooner take six months than go in the ship again. I did not forget about our hunger and never will.

By His Lordship—The sweet potatoes we had at Anjer and Batavia were often so bad that we could not eat them, and we got so few of them that we had to cut them in two to go round all hands. The captain was sick at Batavia. I am sure I saw him on deck the night we were leaving and that he came forward when Raab's head was knocked against the pump.

This concluded the plaintiff's evidence.

Mr. Wotton briefly opened the case for the defence. He said it had been clearly proved that the plaintiff went before the Consul at Kobe—no matter in what form he went—and that the Consul treated him as a deserter. The mere fact of his having been declared a deserter by a competent court debarred him, according to the Act 18 and 19 Vic., c. 104, sub-section 243, from coming before the court now and suing for his wages. The enactment was plain and it was not optional for the Consul to fine him only a portion of his wages or to say he should not forfeit his clothes. The mere fact of his being found a deserter necessitated a forfeiture of his wages and a forfeiture of his clothes.

His Lordship held that although Mr. Wotton's interpretation of the section would apply in a civil case in a criminal case the Consul could fine a deserter any portion of his wages and order him to forfeit the whole of his clothes and effects or any part of them. There was nothing to show that the Consul did order the forfeiture. If he had said that the man's effects were forfeited, he (His Lordship) would not have heard the case at all, because it would have been constituting this court a court of review, and he must presume that the Consul did everything that was right.

Mr. Wotton said that what he had said was the first issue he had to place before his Lordship. He would bring forward the captain, who would state fully what had occurred, and he would bring forward the chief mate and Harris.

His Lordship—Are you going to put Bourke in the box?

Mr. Wotton—No, your Lordship; I am not going to call him.

His Lordship—Are you, Mr. Dennys?

Mr. Dennys—No, your Lordship; how can I? My case practically charges him with manslaughter at the least.

His Lordship—Have other proceedings been taken?

Mr. Dennys said the men were required as witnesses here and the matter had been postponed until the conclusion of this case.

His Lordship—Where is the Frenchman?

Mr. Wotton said he would call the Frenchman and went on to say a mass of evidence had been taken and all the men had had an opportunity of saying what they could. The evidence was not without a number of contradictions, but he did not propose to go through them all at present. There were many cases of assault charged, and if he could establish that they had all been grossly exaggerated he thought his lordship would come to the conclusion the plaintiff had no right to come to the court and say he had been so grossly ill-treated that he was justified in leaving the ship at Kobe. With regard to his clothes the plaintiff had made two statements; he first said he took his clothes away with him, and then he said he told the Consul all his clothes were on board and all his tools. The latter could not be correct according to his own statement. He must have thought his clothes were where he left them and could not have thought they were on The Frederick. He (Mr. Wotton) had made the concession of saying "We don't wish to keep your clothes and tools and all we have we will give you" and he did so. Without taking up the time of the court further he would proceed to call the evidence.

Daw Ditmus Roop, the defendant, said—I am a Canadian and master of the British barque The Frederick. I have been master of the same vessel for three years and three months. The articles entered into at New York I produce. They are for a three years' voyage. I have been a master for over seven years and have been at sea thirteen years. Frank Bell was shipped at New York as boatswain. He was discated on the 19th September, the day we left Bermuda. We sailed from New York on the 15th August. We had to make for Bermuda owing to stress of weather and got in there about the 25th or 26th. The crew consisted of ten able seamen, one ordinary, one boy, cook and steward and a stewardess. The officers were first mate, boatswain, and carpenter. My wife was on board. I took twelve months' provisions on board at New York. At Bermuda I had the stewardess before the magistrate for refusing duty at sea. I have an entry of that in the log. She was sentenced to ten days' imprisonment. After she had been in prison three days I took her on board again on her signing a paper promising good conduct. When she came on board she went straight to her berth and said she was not fit for duty. The doctor certified that she was unfit to go to sea and I discharged her. August Leonhardt summoned me there for an assault. The magistrate heard and determined the case. The charge was dismissed. Leonhardt paying the costs. I produce the magistrate's certificate of dismissal. Leonhardt told the magistrate that he had not had justice, and addressing me said he was not done with me yet. In consequence of this I got a copy of the whole proceedings certified by the magistrate. Nothing else happened at Bermuda with regard to the seamen except that we had to keep a very strict watch on them. They had two months' advance at New York. I had a watchman from ashore. I shipped Bourke the day before I left as boatswain. Bell was discated the day we left; he was incompetent. One seaman named Davis was discharged at Bermuda on account of sickness. Bell's discating was duly entered in the log. There was a piece of wood such as that described by the carpenter, but it was not put up until after we rounded the Cape. It was a piece of wood I used for cutting at with my knife; we are generally doing something of that kind on board ship, what they call whittling in my country. I used to write on it and when it got full I used to cut it down and make it clean again. One day I wrote on it "The sailor's friend, M. Bourke, chairman." That is imagination. It was a rough lath got out of the bread stage. I never hit the carpenter or any man over the head with the stick I refer to. I don't doubt but what I may have struck some of them across the seat with it when they were stopping down pulling braces, but if you had hit hard with it it would have broken. I may have hit the carpenter with this stick. I think I threw it over between Batavia and Kobe, but I cannot be certain. The boatswain served out the food between Bermuda and Anjer. The men did not get so much as they did between New York and Bermuda. I did not notice how the food was going then, but after we left Bermuda I heard that the things were going too fast, and I went to the steward and made him show me the allowance he gave the men. I found he was giving them double rations. There was no copy of the articles put up in the forecastle. I was not furnished with a copy at the shipping office at New York. When I went to the steward to see what he was giving out he measured out the peas, beans, coffee, tea, and things of that kind. The beef and pork he did not weigh, but I could see the quantity that had gone out of the barrel and I know how long a barrel ought to last. I did not weigh the sugar. There are six biscuits to the pound. The men had been getting as much bread as they liked to take. When I found the steward was giving out this quantity I wrote out on a piece of paper the allowance as per agreement and stuck it up in the galley. I believe the men got their allowance after this. I never heard anything to the contrary, and I know there was a barrel of beef and a barrel of pork used to Batavia more than ought to have been. The men get 14lb. of beef when they have no potatoes, when they have plenty of potatoes they only get 11b. I heard no complaints about the food up to arrival in Anjer nor about anything else. At Anjer Frank Koza and Thomas Michael swam ashore. I went ashore and reported them to the Governor. He sent out constables, and they were both captured and brought on board. I was before the Governor with them. Frank Koza told me he said something about the second mate, but I did not hear what it was. Between Anjer and Batavia no complaints were made to me of insufficiency of food or want of water. I cannot say I have never struck the carpenter with the end of a rope, but I never heard of the eye business until I came here. I don't think I ever struck him on the head with a rope while he was on the ship. I never struck at his eye. I don't remember his eye being bad. I positively deny striking him in the eye. I may have struck him on the back of the shoulders. I never struck a man hard enough to hurt him—just a tap to make him move a little faster. I deny having struck the carpenter frequently. I may have hit him three or four times with the rope and with the stick. I deny having hit him so as to hurt him. There were no complaints made to me at Batavia of any on board ill-treating the crew. I never heard anything about Bourke striking the carpenter with his fist and a knotted rope. I did not see anything of the disturbance on Christmas night, but I was told of it by the mate. No complaint was made to me about it. At Batavia Raab and Vincent went ashore. I did not go to the Consul; I was sick. The men were brought on board again. Raab was not sick going into Batavia that I know of. He ran away about a week after arrival and was absent about six days. He was brought on board the day we left. The mate informed me that Raab was ill and I told him to get the doctor to see him. This was before he ran away. I can't say whether the doctor saw him, but the mate told me he did. I was sick at the time. First I had dysentery and then I took the fever. Several of the crew were sick at Batavia. I was not out of the cabin myself for nine or ten days. I was not sick all the time we were at Batavia. I went ashore the last day to clear the vessel, but I had to take the mate with me to help me along I was so weak. I have an entry in the log book of the desertion of Raab and Vincent, dated January 13th. None of the sailors asked for permission to go ashore at Batavia. We left on Saturday night, about eight o'clock I think. When they commenced to heave the anchor up I was on the poop, but I got exhausted and went to my cabin before they finished. I came up to the head of the companion when I thought the ship was under way to see that all was right, and I told the mate to take charge of her. I did not go on deck. I might have been on the companion three or four minutes. I did not see any striking or knocking of the men about at that time. It is not true that I went forward on hearing screaming and asked who was making the noise, that the second mate said it was one of the gentlemen who was sick and ran away last Sunday, and that I said if I heard such a noise again I would knock his —— head off. No such conversation ever took place. I only went forward once that night and that was before tea to look if we had a clear passage. I heard nothing about the winch until I heard it in court. We were sixty-eight days from Batavia and Kobe. I always told the mates to see that the men had the nails properly driven into their boots so that they would not mark the deck. One day the carpenter was working at the poop. I looked into the room and saw a pair of boots which had elastic sides but which had been cut down like slippers. The heels were full of large nails. I asked him why he did not take the nails out. He said he did not want to destroy his boots. I told him he must not wear them about the deck then. He got angry and took up a hatchet to chop the heel off one of them, but the hatchet went right through the sole and he then threw them overboard. I believe there was no one present at the time but myself and the carpenter. Bourke took sick the day after we left Batavia. That is not entered in the log. I did not think it was necessary.

His Lordship commented on the carelessness of ship-masters in not making entries of all the occurrences the law required them to make entries of, whereby they deprived themselves of very valuable evidence in some cases, because the entry is made evidence by law.

Evidence continued—Bourke told me he was ill before leaving Batavia. I was not much on deck for some time after leaving Batavia. The first I knew of Raab's illness was six or seven days after leaving Batavia, when I was told he was suffering from dysentery. I went forward and saw him. He told me he was bad inside and going to the closet all the time. I saw he was passing blood, and I came to the conclusion that he was suffering from dysentery. I gave him medicine according to the instructions of the "Medical Guide." I also gave instructions for him to have different food. I ordered slop food—rice, arrowroot, etc. The man was laid up then. I went to see him every day. I often took the medicine to him myself, and my wife would make things for him which I would take to him. Sometimes I used to go in two or three times a day, and I gave instructions to the cook to go in every now and then and give him what assistance he required. I have an entry of his death in the log dated February 8th. We arrived at Kobe in the latter part of March. At Kobe a man named Albert Gusker deserted on April 7th. He was not found again. Thomas Michael and George Jackson went ashore without leave. Michael went to the Consul; the boy I had arrested. I have no entry of their leaving. The Consul sent Michael back on board the ship. I took Jackson to the Consul and he was sent on board. I was before the Consul at the same time as Michael and Jackson. I do not think he was sworn. The Consul said Michael wanted to go to hospital. I said I would have a doctor to see him and I took him on board. He laid up on board, but deserted again just before we left, and did not return. Three days before we left Kobe, on the 27th April, the mate reported to me that the man refused duty. I went forward into the forecastle and asked them why they did not work. There were Sisk, Bell, Jackson, Koza, Vincent, Olson, Burgisson and Leonhardt. They said they were not going to do any more work until they had seen the Consul. I think Bell and Leonhardt were spokesmen, but each individually refused to work. I asked them if that was the proper way to ask to see a Consul. I advised them to go to work and told them they should see the Consul, but that they must not refuse duty. They still refused to go to work, and I went ashore and reported it to the Consul. Before I did so I called Carl Olson into the cabin, as I thought he was not a likely man to be the instigator of it, and asked him who was at the bottom of it. He satisfied me that he was not, and who was. I took Bell and Sisk before the Consul, and charged them with refusal of duty. It was between ten and eleven o'clock when I took them before the Consul, and they were there an hour or an hour and a half. They stated their case to the Consul, Mr. Flowers. He investigated it and told them to go on board again. They refused, and he sent them to prison pending the departure of the ship. There was an entry made in the official log-book at the time, which I now produce. The carpenter left the ship on 21st April. That is entered in the log. I was at Kioto, forty miles inland, and I returned on Monday. I entered the desertion on Tuesday, the 23rd, and reported it the same day to the Consul. When the Consul returned me the articles there was an entry made on them; I did not see it made. I never heard anything about the stage and the drowning scene at Kobe until I heard it in court here. Sisk and Bell were brought on board the day we left and were set to work. I was not on board when the men were brought off, but they were at work when I got on board. It is usual at sea to give the men a treat at Christmas. My wife made two large cakes, one for each watch, and the men had their cakes and liquor on Christmas night. I sent a pint bottle of gin to the carpenter for himself and the cook. It was reported to me afterwards that the carpenter was trying to hang himself. I told the mate to bring him aft where he could not do any harm to himself. I saw him when he was aft. He appeared to be drunk. Leonhardt stole some soap at Batavia. It was on a Monday morning. I was told the men had no soap, so I told the boy Jackson to cut a piece for each man and give it to them when they had done washing down the deck. He put it on the dog-house. I found there was one piece missing. I asked Leonhardt if he knew anything about it and he said he did not. After the soap was found in his bed he acknowledged taking it. An entry was made in the log-book and read to Leonhardt. He said, "You had better give me my discharge." I said I would not, and told him to go off the poop. I told him a second time to go down. He refused, and I then called to the mate to remove him. Leonhardt drew his knife and said he would stab the first man who came near him. He then jumped down on to the main deck. The mate rushed after him and clinched him to get the knife. They had a scuffle, and I went up and the man was put in irons. He was only in irons for five or ten minutes. He then promised to behave himself and I released him. I never gave orders that the heels of the boots of the men were to be cut off. I think the mate served out the allowances between Batavia and Kobe. No complaints were made to me of short food. The barrels of biscuit were marked as to gross and net weight. I believe that the smallest weight was 75lb. One barrel a week was given out for the eleven men in the forecastle. There were only ten men after Raab died. Sometimes the men ran short before the end of the week and I gave them more several times. They never complained of not receiving their allowance according to scale. When they asked me for more I told them they had had their week's allowance and if they had used it all they must go without. They said they had no bread to eat, and so I gave them some more as I did not like to see them without bread. I told the mate to take an inventory of the things left on board by the carpenter. There were never any complaints made personally to me about the conduct of the mates. During the time the men refused duty at Kobe I believe they were locked up at nights, but I did not see them. When I saw the Consul about the men refusing duty he told me to bring them ashore. I said I would not bring them all ashore, I must have some on board. He said I must do as I liked about that. I told him that I would bring Sisk and Bell ashore and would keep the others on board, and would give them very little food until they turned to, only bread and water. They had no food on Saturday by my orders. I ordered them to have some bread and water on Sunday morning. Two of the men turned to on Sunday, and the other three on Monday. They were not locked up by my orders. I have no entry in my log of this punishment. I reported it to the British Consul. I have no evidence of that. It is not correct that I struck and kicked Frank Koza before he jumped overboard. What Koza says about that is false.

By Mr. Dennys—I do not come from New Brunswick. I come from Canada. It is not customary to have a fighting second mate or bruiser on board ships from Canada or New Brunswick. I am not aware of such a custom. When I engaged my second mate in New York I don't remember saying a word to him about his ability to fight. That was Bell. I did not see Bell knock the man about between New York and Bermuda. I can say the same for Bourke between Bermuda and Batavia. I may have seen him strike the men with a rope, but I never saw him hurt a man. I may have seen him strike with his hand. I never saw him strike with anything else than his hand or a rope. I never saw him hurt anyone. I saw Frank Bell at the wheel one day between Batavia and Kobe. He appeared unable to use one arm. I went to him and asked him if anything was the matter with his arm. He told me he had fallen and hurt it. I examined it, and found there was nothing broken. I gave him some lotion, and told him to keep his arm in a sling, and it got better. Bourke did not treat the men altogether as I wanted him. He kept them working at night, which was against my orders. That information came to me after Bourke left the ship. I saw Bourke a few days ago. I have not subpœned him as a witness. He has no particular love for me. The carpenter does not belong to the ship now. I consider him a deserter. The term of three years for which he signed is not finished. Having been written off the articles, I don't know whether I could take him back on board or not. I have not tried to do so. I did not keep a regular wages book this voyage. The one I produce I have made up on the voyage from Kobe and in Hongkong. I made up the carpenter's account coming down from within the next fortnight, as his presence is necessary there to ensure the carrying out of the recent treaty between Peru and China.

THE NEW BULGARIA.

A letter from St. Petersburg in the Pester Lloyd says that the first national assembly of the new Bulgaria will probably meet next month. The Assembly will consist of from 350 to 400 deputies, who will have to consider the electoral bill brought in by the Russian Government. According to this bill all Bulgarians who pay taxes will have the franchise and be qualified to come forward as candidates for the assembly, but only those may be elected who can read and write. The Russian Government intends to dissolve the Assembly as soon as the electoral bill has been passed; the members will then take part in the provincial councils, after which a general election, based on the new law, will take place, so as to enable the Assembly to meet on the 2nd of January, 1879." This second Assembly will have, among other work, to prepare laws for the judicial and other administrations, and to fix the budget for the year. The session is to be a short one, and the Assembly will be subject to the orders of the higher administrative functionaries. Shortly before the expiration of the period of the Russian occupation, at third meeting of the Assembly is to take place for the election of a prince. The correspondent adds that, in order to extend the use of the Russian language in Bulgaria, a considerable number of the Bulgarian clergy, officials, and students are to be sent to the Russian universities, where they will study under the supervision of officials specially appointed for the purpose. The military organisation of the Bulgarians, too, is proceeding with great success. Besides the 6,000 Bulgarian militia who were employed in the war, 9,000 recruits have been levied, who will serve for the present in the instructional battalions of the Russian regiments. These 15,000 men will form the cadres of the national army of the future principality. This is written, of course, on the assumption that there will be one Bulgaria, as General Ignatieff proposed, and not two, as is now generally anticipated.

THE RUSSIAN PRESS ON ENGLAND'S EASTERN POLICY.

The Golos gives the following account of the policy of England in the Eastern Question:—"Every Englishman, whatever party he may belong to, recognizes the necessity of England's maintaining such prestige in the East as to make any solution of the Eastern Question without her co-operation impossible, and knows that such prestige is indispensable for the maintenance of the British rule in India. At the time when Disraeli became the head of the Conservative party this prestige had sunk to its lowest ebb. Mr. Gladstone's pacific and colourless policy secured to England the blessings peace, but lowered her in international relations. When the Conservatives came into power, they demanded a bold foreign policy, conformably with their traditions, in order to silence the cry for internal reform. The ever-young Eastern Question gave the Government the opportunity of reconquering for England her former position in Europe. By refusing to take part in the Berlin Memorandum she made that document inoperative, and her political authority increased accordingly. The protocols of the Constantinople Conference, and all that depended upon them, show what immense prestige England has gained. When the war broke out Lord Beaconsfield expected that it would totally exhaust the forces of Russia. The brilliant deeds of our soldiers astonished and frightened England, but only for a short time. Directly Turkey lay at the feet of Russia England began to act. She armed openly for a struggle with Russia, perceiving that the moment had arrived when the whole of England's prestige in the East was in danger of disappearing before the victorious advance of our army. England was ready to declare war; but there was no casus belli, for Russia had conscientiously fulfilled the conditions which England laid down in May, 1877, as the basis for her neutrality. Then England changed her policy; she came forward as the defender of European law and of the sacredness of international treaties. Russia was represented as the enemy of Europe, the insatiable conqueror, the violator of treaties. England attained her object—Europe all the time forgetting that England never abandons even for a moment her selfish interests. And now Mr. Layard is the Vice-Sultan, and his orders are unresistingly carried out by the Porte."

RAISING SUNKEN SHIPS.

The following account is published of the raising of two sunken ships in the outer roads off the port of Montevideo, in the La Plata:—"In 1878 the Workington, a full-rigged ship of 2,000 tons, laden with coals, and on fire, was scuttled in the roads, and settled into soft mud, so that her topsail yards were only visible above the water. She was bought by a Frenchman. He at once secured all her top-hamper for staging on which to erect purchases (and did not strip her, as the Eurydice was stripped) to discharge her cargo with and work his divers' pumps from. He had strong Pampero winds, and three or four knot currents to contend against. However, by working both day and night, and in as bad and exposed position as though the ship had been off the Isle of Wight, he discharged all the cargo of coals, then commenced to fill the hold with wine casks, which were stowed below by six divers. The casks had an inch hole bored in each head, then filled with water, and a long spigot placed in the holes, then slung in a chain lowered to the divers (the chains helping to sink the cask) and placed into position by them; when there they had only to take out both plugs, insert the end of the air nozzle into one hole and blow the water out by the other, then plug them both up, when the cask would be filled with air. Upon one calm day they thus placed 250 casks. They stuck to the job for nine weeks, and brought the ship out of her bed in which she had settled 13 feet deep into the harbour. The tremendous force of the united efforts of the casks had burst her upper deck and so strained her deck beams that they had to be taken out and repaired. The ship, under the name of Porteno, is now afloat, and has made many profitable voyages for her owner. Now, the divers said they experienced no difficulty while working in the hold from current or rough water, but were only troubled by the darkness and the slippery settlements left on all footing by the sand deposits, of which the hold had, at least, 50 tons, and this had to be lifted with the iron hull of the ship, iron lowermasts, bowsprit, lower yards, and all dock gear. The second case was a wooden brig cut down by a steamer to the water's edge, which was treated in a like manner, only that the immense hole in her side had to be planked and covered with canvas. She was successfully brought into harbour, although seven miles out-side when she went down, and in a channel where the whole force of the river is constantly running at four to four and a half knots, and not three days without a blow more or less severe."

ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY, WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have to late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration:—Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.

OXYGEN IS LIFE.

ALTHOUGH the modern Materia Medica includes many valuable remedies for human afflictions, it is a matter of certainty that in all cases where the animal vitality is failing, Phosphorus is decidedly superior to every other remedy at present known. It will work effects such as nothing else will produce, and it possesses the great advantage of not causing, when its use is relinquished, the slightest reaction or depression.

CAUTION.—PHOSPHORUS is sometimes sold in the form of Pills and Lozenges; it should be generally known that every form where solid particles of Phosphorus are in combination is dangerous. It is therefore necessary that the public should be cautioned against the use of any form of Phosphorus not perfectly soluble in water.

PROTECTED BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT,
Dated October 11th, 1869.
UNDER DISTINGUISHED PATRONAGE.

DR. BEIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE

DR. BEIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE is sold only in Cases at 10s. 6d. by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors throughout the Globe.

Full Directions for use in the English, French, German, Italian, Dutch, Spanish, Portuguese, Russian, Danish, Turkish, Persian, Hindostani, Madrasee, Bengalee, Chinese, and Japanese Languages, accompany each case.
